do this by empowering our employees to be engaged in quality and continuous strides to make the patient experience excellent.”

In the Short-Term Rehabilitation category, Jerome Home exceeded the state and national averages in nurse staffing; physical therapist staffing; patient-centered rehabilitation therapy; patients’ ability to return home; prevention of falls; and other factors. The new Long-Term Care rating was based on nurse staffing, hospitalizations, ability to self-care and additional areas.

“We look forward to many additional years of being recognized as high performing,” Toombs said.

Jerome Home receives national Best Nursing Home Rating

Jerome Home, which offers skilled nursing, inpatient/outpatient rehabilitation, residential care, memory care and assisted living, recently received the highest Best Nursing Homes Rating from U.S. News & World Report.

Jerome Home, managed by Hartford HealthCare Senior Services, received the top “high performing” rating for Short-Term Rehabilitation and Long-Term Care, meriting the highest Overall Rating.

Of the more than 15,000 nursing homes evaluated nationwide by U.S. News, only 2,969 facilities met the top criteria. A total of 420 nursing homes were deemed “high performing” for both Short-Term Rehabilitation and Long-Term Care. The Overall Rating, based on a five-point scale, evaluates the wide range of care for long-term residents and short-term patients. Ratings are categorized as “below average,” “average” or “high performing.”

“To receive this designation from U.S. News & World Report is such a privilege,” said Lori Toombs, executive director of Jerome Home. “Jerome Home remains committed to continuous quality that promotes improvements for all our residents/patients. We

Lymphedema Management Program may provide positive outcomes

Got swelling?

Does your clothing feel tighter? Does your limb feel heavier? Do you experience limitations in joint mobility? If so, you may have edema/ lymphedema.

Edema can be a result of an acute injury/surgery or a more chronic condition such as lymphedema (primary or secondary) or peripheral vascular disease, for example. Lymphedema is a dysfunction of the lymphatic system which transports protein-rich fluid throughout our body. A build-up of this fluid causes mild to severe limb girth, increasing risk of infection or cellulitis, changes to skin texture, wounds and overall decline in functional mobility.

A lymphedema management program can be effective in managing this condition. The first step is a comprehensive evaluation obtained through medical history. The individual will then undergo sensory evaluation and pain assessment, range of motion and strength testing, girth measurements of the affected limb, and assessing any mobility limitations that may affect normal activity. Treatment may include manual lymph drainage, skin care, gradient compression bandaging, measuring/fitting compression garments, and patient education in self-maintenance.

The goal of a lymphedema management program is to decrease the swelling of the affected limb, improve skin integrity to reduce risk of infection, properly fit compression garments to prevent swelling from recurring, and provide self-maintenance education to maintain the highest level of independence with mobility and activities of daily living.

For more information about the Lymphedema Management Program at Jerome Home, contact Laurel Whalen, RPT/ CLT, Jerome Home Outpatient Rehabilitation, 860.356.8266.

with Sherry Vogt, Hartford HealthCare veterans' liaison. The New Britain High School ROTC Color Guard also assisted.

In his volunteer role with the Marine Corps League, Jimenez, a marketing analyst for The Travelers insurance company, assists with reintegrating veterans into society when they return from active duty. He knows the challenges of adjusting firsthand: while serving in Afghanistan in 2010 he lost his left arm, hearing in his left ear and partial sight in his left eye from a roadside bomb. Recipient of a Purple Heart and Combat Action Ribbon, he was able to mainstream thanks to, in part, after a handicap-accessible home was built for him and by "paying it forward" as an active community volunteer. "Protecting our brothers never ends," he said.

Vogt, who is also an Army veteran, said that the oath of military enlistment continues to bind all veterans, including those attending the ceremony. "From George Washington until today, we are a long chain of those who said 'yes' to serving our country," she said.

Honorees included Richard A., Robert A., Lucien A., Richard B., Edward B., Charles D., Paul D., Bruce E., Kenneth L., Donald E., Bernard G., Graham H., Gerald K., Alexander P., Carlton R., Joseph R., Thomas S., Edward S., Romeo S. and Lawrence T. The oldest veteran was 103.

To continually recognize those who served, a Wall of Honor has been established which includes photos and the names of the residents.
